Dear Sam,

Thank you for your recent written question asking me what assessment I have made of the use of 4D mapping technology in health and social care in Wales.

I am aware the Department for Health and Social Care has highlighted the potential for 4D mapping technology, which can track people's movements, to be used. This follows several, small scale pilots in care homes across England. It is understood further tests are planned to gather more evidence.

My officials will remain engaged with their UK Government counterparts as the full outcomes of these trials are awaited.

New and emerging technologies provide opportunities to add to the support available to people living with frailty and complex needs.

Yours sincerely,

Eluned Morgan AS/MS
